Dissertation: Research Study

It is recommended that permission be granted for the Camden City School District to have John P. Armstrong, Jr., Temple University student, to conduct a research study, as a part of his doctoral dissertation, “Typical” Characteristics of Giftedness or Giftedness Masked by Behavioral Difficulties Depending on Randomization”.

A teacher sampling of up to 100 participants is needed for this study which will take place February 2021-May 2021.

The purpose of the study is to see how behavioral expectations of gifted students and student race intersect during the gifted identification process.

- Teachers read a single short story about a mock student that may describe a student displaying "typical" characteristics of giftedness or giftedness masked by behavioral difficulties depending on randomization”. The race of the student (non-CCSD student) will also be randomized between a White student and an African American student.
- After reading the short story, teachers answer two questions regarding their perception of the student (gifted vs. non-gifted, referral vs. no referral).
- Then, complete 12 short demographic questions related to their education, training, and teaching experience.

At no point during the survey or its dissemination will identifying information (names of teachers, schools, or school districts) be collected or divulged. The results of the study will remain confidential and anonymous.

To ensure that the teachers are protected, John P. Armstrong, Jr., has provided to the District and with Temple University’s approved Institutional Review Board document, before he survey’s the participants at Camden City School District.

Camden City School District will not be used in any publications or presentations and that John P. Armstrong, Jr. will protect data to the best of his ability. John P. Armstrong, Jr. has agreed to provide a copy of the study results, in aggregate, to Camden City School District.

There will be no cost to the board.
