Creative Arts High School Takes Us Back to the 19th Century for ‘The Princess and the Pea’
Creative Arts High School students take “The Princess and the Pea” and brings it into the 21st century with music, singing, and dancing

Camden, NJ –The Camden City School District’s Creative Arts High School presents the play “The Princess and the Pea” performed by high school students. The play is adapted from the children’s book written by Rachel Isadora from the tale written by Hans Christian Andersen. The book is brought to life under the leadership of Dr Davida Coe-Brockington and the director Ms. Desi P. Shelton. In the world of magical kingdoms, a prince is searching the world for a princess to marry. With every encounter, the prince faces adversity. Will the princess be found? Will the prince be happy?

“I am so excited to attend our first in-person theatrical performance at the New Camden High Campus, said Superintendent McCombs.” Our Creative Arts students along with director Desi Shelton and musical director Jamal P. Dickerson, have worked extremely hard to produce an amazing show for our community. I am very proud and encourage others to come and enjoy the performance.”

“I am ecstatic about the work and creativity of the staff and students. said Creative Arts Principal Coe Brockington.” I look forward to an amazing production and hope all that attend sees the talent and love for the arts shown by our school community .”
