Camden City School District to celebrate Financial Literacy Month with 13-Year-Old High School Graduate and CEO, Caden Harris

Caden, 13-Year-Old High School Graduate and CEO, Featured on Good Morning America, Aims to Revolutionize Financial Education in Dudley Family School.

April 11, 2024 –The Camden City School District and the Hill Family Center for College Access at Rutgers University-Camden have partnered with Caden Harris, a 13-year-old high school graduate and CEO, to initiate April's Financial Literacy Month. They will showcase his expertise in the City of Camden, where he will serve as the keynote speaker for the Middle School Financial Literacy Symposium on April 11th. This event offers a prime opportunity for students, educators, and professionals to learn from a young prodigy who has attained significant success in the financial sector.

Who: Superintendent McCombs, Mayor Carstarphen, Hill Family Center for College Access at Rutgers University-Camden, Caden Harris, and Dudley Family School staff and students

When: Thursday, April 11, 2024 | 9:30am (welcome remarks) | 10am (student workshops)

Where: Dudley Family School | 2250 Berwick St. Camden

BACKGROUND: Caden, an exceptional 13-year-old high school graduate, has made waves in the financial world with his impressive six-figure earnings as the CEO of Financial Prodigy. Recently, he garnered national attention as he was featured on Good Morning America with host Mike Strahan, who hailed him for his outstanding success and leadership in the realm of finances.

Caden's groundbreaking achievements highlight his passion for empowering young minds and equipping them with essential financial literacy skills. Developing a brand new cash code textbook curriculum, Caden aims to partner with major corporations to fund schools nationwide. This curriculum has become increasingly necessary as more schools realize the importance of providing students with the tools to navigate personal finances confidently.

Recognizing the urgent need for comprehensive financial education in middle and high schools, Caden is dedicated to ensuring that this curriculum reaches as many students as possible. By partnering with major corporations, he aims to secure the necessary funding to implement the curriculum in schools across the country.
