

Forest Hill School Universal Hallway Expectations

School wide routines, including those for hallways, are taught during the first week of school. Teachers go over the expected behaviors with their students, model them, and practice with their classes. When students return from school breaks, and at other times throughout the year, there may be times to refresh these expectations. The key is to keep practicing all year to make it happen all year.

No student is to be in the hall or restroom during instructional time without a pass.
